

A photograph of a bathroom interior. On the left, a white door is partially open, with a white towel hanging from a brass ring. The wall is covered in white subway tiles. In the center, a window with white shutters looks out onto a green landscape. Below the window, a small wooden table with metal legs holds a stack of three white towels, a small round tray with a bar of soap, and a potted orchid. The floor is made of light-colored marble tiles with a hexagonal pattern.

THE PERFECT BATH

RIZZOLI
NEW YORK

BARBARA SALLICK

Contents

Foreword by Peter Sallick 9

Introduction 10

I. Planning Is Everything 16

II. The Canvas 58

III. Design and Decoration 120

IV. Points of View:
Architects and Designers 176

Lee F. Mindel 179

Gil Schafer 186

Steven Gambrel 196

Pamela Shamshiri 209

Thomas O'Brien 214

Suzanne Lovell 224

Tim Clarke 233

V. Step by Step 240

Designer Directory 268

Photography Credits 271

Acknowledgments 272

opposite: This dressing room and bath combination is drawn together by the consistency of the color palette and, especially, the millwork, which at once conveys coziness and efficiency. above: The drollery inherent in having the library adjoin the bath is hard to resist. This is an entertaining, lighthearted space.